Not yet. Today is a holiday (Labor Day) and didn't want to bother anyone. I'll call him tomorrow.

Thanks,
Jesse

Hi, Jesse,
Can you have a talk with him?
I think besides what you have suggested, his past relations with some educations and towns maybe can also be used for Fisci market.

Hi Sun Lixin,

We do need a product manager for Baicells NA, and that is the best fit I envision for him. We are at the point that we need someone dedicated to working with the Baicells LTD R&D team to manage and prioritize all feature requests for both hardware and software. She could also support some R&D prep work as well, such as, there is an immediate need on helping commercialize and package the EPC software into a VM appliance. In this case, the resources of the EPC team is limited and needs additional support before we can release the software.

Currently, and up until now, I have been responsible for these tasks, but we are at a size that it makes sense to have someone dedicated to support and drive these activities.

Some other thoughts:

You should prepare for requested salary to be high. With his experience level and location, he will likely request north of $120k/year. Here is what Glassdoor shows:

Product Manager Salaries in San Diego, CA

220 Salaries

Updated Aug 20, 2017

You will likely have to work out with Patrick a separation R&D budget which you can put the product manager and the requested web developer in as well.

Would you like me to contact Ronald directly to see how much of a good fit he is?

Thank you,

Jesse Raasch

Do you have any comments for whether he is suitable for Fisci or Baicells NA?
